DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY SEMINAR:
84920 THEOLOGICAL ANTHROPOLOGY

VALUING THE BODY FROM CONCEPTION THROUGH ETERNITY

Gregg R. Allison, instructor

SYLLABUS

COURSE DESCRIPTION

A study of classical and contemporary understandings of humankind is undertaken. Various issues will be explored, such as the creation, nature, constitution, development, inner life, physical body, sexuality, male and female identities and roles, and personhood of human beings.

With regard to this specific course: An exploration of the teaching of Scripture concerning life in the human body with the goal of developing a systematic and practical theology of physical existence from conception through eternity. Topics to be covered include the creation of the body (both in a global and personal sense), the development of the body, a survey of attitudes toward the body throughout history, the soul-body (or mind-body) problem, the “gendered” body, the sexual body, the disciplined body, the body and the worship of God, clothing the body, the sanctification of the body, the suffering and healing of the body, the death of the body, the eschatological body (the body in the intermediate state, the resurrection of the body, the body in the Millennium, and the body in the new heavens and earth), and current issues regarding the body (cloning, abortion, euthanasia, etc.). This course will also consider insights into the body’s functioning and development from the disciplines of nutrition, exercise physiology, and psychology.
COURSE GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

1. To identify and interpret key passages articulating the Scriptural teaching on the human body and to incorporate this multi-faceted instruction into a systematic and practical theology of physical existence.

2. To consider what other disciplines (nutrition, exercise physiology, psychology) have to say about the human body and to appropriate those insights that integrate appropriately with the Scriptural teaching into an overall theology of physical existence.

3. To begin to grasp some of the many perspectives on the human body which have been expressed throughout history and (some of) which continue to our current time, so as to: a) recognize what factors have influenced our thinking about the body, b) sort out Scriptural perspectives on the body from other perspectives, and c) allow the Scriptural teaching on physical existence to remake our perspective on, and dominate our treatment of, our body.

4. To overcome any negative perspectives and feelings about the human body as somehow being inherently evil or the ultimate source of sin, and as being a hindrance to spiritual and moral development or outside of God’s redemptive purpose and work.

5. To learn to value deeply:

   - the miracle of physical life;
   - the gender that God has created us;
   - those of the other, complementary gender;
   - our human sexuality;
   - physical discipline;
   - divine action in and through our body;
   - our aging and bodily suffering, along with divine grace in healing;
   - our body.

6. To design a personal program of proper eating, drinking, resting, sleeping, and exercising that is appropriate for the students in their particular current state in life and that is in accordance with God’s call on their life.

7. To contemplate the death of our body and consider the future of our body in various eschatological states.

8. To develop a biblically-based model of life in the human body from our systematic and practical theology of physical existence, and to apply this model to current issues regarding the body such as cloning, abortion, euthanasia, etc.
COURSE REQUIREMENTS

1. Regular attendance at, and participation, in class lectures and discussions. Students are expected to come to class prepared to discuss the topic(s) for the day.

2. Thorough reading of all assigned articles, books, handouts, etc., and exegesis of the assigned biblical texts. Please keep a log of your reading, listing the assignment, the due date, the date of completion, and the percentage of credit received. Reading assignments completed late will be lowered 15% for each class day they are completed after the assigned date.

   There is no need to write out your exegesis of the passages, and no exegetical assignments will be collected and graded. But you should make exegetical notes and come to class prepared to discuss the passages assigned. I may ask students to rotate leading the exegetical discussion. (I will assign this ahead of time so you can be thoroughly prepared.) So for each passage, read it several times and work through the passage using your exegetical skills, engaging in careful and thorough interpretation. Then consult the best commentaries to help you work through any difficult issues. What you should have is a solid, defensible interpretation of the passage. In class, we will then work through the implications of the passage for our developing theology of the body.

3. Research paper. You will select a topic on the theology of the body and research and write an academic paper (20 pages, double-spaced, endnotes). Please get my approval for your topic before you begin to research and write. Any of the topics outlined in the “Course Assignments” section (below) are excellent, but you are certainly not limited to those. A historical study of a particular “body” tradition may be done, interaction with a current issue regarding the body may be undertaken, exegesis of a particularly important Scriptural passage may be carried out, etc. Guidelines: Southern Seminary Manual of Style.

4. Application paper. In lieu of a final exam you will be asked to interact with three of the topics covered in this class and articulate your application of them to your own body. One of the three must be designing a personal program of proper eating, drinking, resting, sleeping, and exercising that is appropriate for you in your particular current state in life and that is in accordance with God’s call on your life. This paper should be about ten pages in length (double-spaced), but the amount of pages is not the issue; rather, the practical interaction with three topics and application of them to your own body is key.
COURSE POLICIES

Course Grading:

Reading and participation  50%
Research paper            35%
Application paper         15%

Late Assignments:

Assignments (research paper, application paper) turned in late will be lowered 1/2 of a grade (e.g. B to B-) for each class day they are turned in after the assigned date. Reading assignments completed late will be lowered 15% for each class day they are completed after the assigned date.

Note for Students with Disabilities: In order to ensure full class participation, any student with a disabling condition requiring accommodations (e.g., tape recorders, special adaptive equipment, special note-taking needs) is strongly encouraged to contact the professor and the Garrett Fellow at the beginning of the course.
