Policy Concerning Request for Double Major

In rare cases, a student has the option of double majoring in two concentrations. The primary concentration consists of the normal requirements for one's Ph.D. major: 5 seminars, 4 colloquia, Guided Reading Mentorship. For the second major, a student completes at least 4 area seminars and 4 area colloquia. Thus, a student with a double major will complete at least 9 seminars and 8 colloquia. Double majors must be approved by a student's supervisor and the RDS office by submitting the Application for Double Major form.

NB: A double major is not required to teach in a particular discipline. Rather, the SACS accrediting agency recommends 18 hours of doctoral coursework to qualify a candidate to teach at the graduate (i.e., Master's) level. Thus, if a student is primarily concerned with being qualified to teach a particular subject at the graduate level, the R.D.S. recommends that student take 16 hours of seminars and 1 colloquium in their minor concentration. Note that the second major colloquium is in addition to the required four primary major colloquia.
